Decision

Conference to be ranked/tagged as C.

Justification

ILRN was requested to be reranked as B. However, metrics indicate that the current rank of C is justified. The conference sits in a similar range as other C-ranked conferences for citations and below the range of C conferences for author strength in 4608. The conference has an h5-index of 11. The PC has a large number of members (around 150, 20% of them being established researchers. ILRN receives a good number of submissions (around 150), however, the acceptance rates are high (around 70%). The selected top people seem to attend regularly (however it is important to note that top people were not selected according to the requirements for this list. Overall the data shows that ILRN is slightly below C rank, but some established researchers seem to be involved, we recommend to keep rank C.
