The IDA conference is listed in the CORE database since 2008 on rank A, and a submission requested to retain its rank. However after checking the submission and the data indicators, the panel agreed to re-ranked it as rank B. The IDA symposium seems to be rather small, given its area or research, with just 65-75 total submissions and a rather high acceptance rate of 40-45%; the conference's Google Scholar h5-index is 12 which is too low for a rank A conference. The conference chairs and PC appear rather junior, with an average h-index for PC members of 15 and the general chairs typically below 20. Only few PC members publish here themselves, and the ranking submission does not give any top-people report. One committee member (Dobbie) identified a conflict with this conference and was not part of the decision.
