This conference was ranked B. The committee was asked to review this and now recommends it move to rank C. The conference received 600-900 submissions in the last three years and had an acceptance rate of 46 - 56%. The h-index of the PC members is mainly below 20 and even the top ones are just over 20. This is low for a B ranked conference. The h-index for the conference is 18, which is low for a conference with so many published papers. The scope of the conference is quite broad, covering Engineering education and potentially including some computer science education.
