The conference was brought up as a comparator and is currently ranked A. Over the recent years, VRST has usually around ~150 submissions with a competitive acceptance rate of around 20%-26 and is ranking 8th in Google Scholar for Computer Graphics (H5 index of 20). The general chairs are well established but did not always have absolute leaders among their organisers (with an h-index > 30). For the provided data 5/24 of the PC committee have h-index greater than 18, and 13/23 of the PC committee has published at VRST in the last 5 years.

The conference is well respected and has a relatively long history but seemed to go through a trough a few years ago. However, more recently the conference drastically increased the numbers of submissions while maintaining a low acceptance rate. Overall, while one could argue it is on the weaker side for an A, the positive outlook convinced the panel to recommend an A which is also partially supported by the data.
